How to find good software stocks

Software stocks have provided amongst the highest returns of any ASX sector. There have been plenty of success stories in the last decade, led by Xero (ASX:XRO), Pro Medicus

Is $100 or more an expensive share price?

With few ASX companies with share prices over $100, you'd be forgiven for thinking it is an expensive share price. Overseas, share prices higher than $100 is far more common.

(ASX:PME) and WiseTech (ASX:WTC). Just look at the exponential return WiseTech shareholders have made since 2016!

But at the same time, there have been dud software stocks too, like Hiremii (ASX:HMI) and Limeade (ASX:LME). So, how can you sort out the good companies from the bad ones? In this article we recap 4 of the best differentiators.

Granted, they might think Berkshire Hathaway has an expensive share price at over US$500,000. But in this article, we recap why looking at an individual share price and judging it as expensive on that fact alone is not correct.

Spoiler alert: don't look at the share price. Instead, you need to look at the company's market capitalisation to see how much it is worth.
